Strange Intimacies: Diaspora, Transnationalism, and Affect in American Fiction

Description
We will investigate how conceptual categories of diasporic migrations, forced and otherwise, are constructed in literature: the figures of the expatriate and immigrant, as well as the exile, slave, refugee, and cosmopolite. Legal definitions may help delineate the boundaries of each term, but intimate and affective aspects of diasporic experiences, in the 20th-21st century American literary imagination, often define each term culturally and discursively. Expatriates and immigrants might be similar in denotation—that is, they describe people who leave one land for another, a process usually involving crossing national borders and developing affiliations to multiple places. However, in connotation, each term can conjure varying norms or expectations, for example, a narrative of successful immigrant assimilation juxtaposed to one of cosmopolitan, transnational mobility.

What can we understand about diaspora by exploring texts representing different experiences of it? How does diaspora destabilize intimacy as a heuristic—in the spheres of identity, domesticity, and individuality and in the spheres of political economies, colonial histories, and global processes? This tutorial will focus on the intimate and affective dimensions of displacement and pay particular attention to gendered experiences of diaspora and diaspora as a condition of subjectivity. We will survey a selection of novels and short stories that address themes of the dispersion of people from their places of origin. How are issues of socioeconomic status, citizenship status, race/ethnicity, gender/sexuality, and cultural and economic globalization influential in both literary and social forms pertaining to diaspora? We will explore the tensions that arise when we put categories of migration into play as unsettled and disputable. Primary texts include works by: Hemingway, Larsen, Nabokov, Baldwin, Truong, Díaz, Cole, Morrison, Lahiri, Nguyen, Mengestu, Adichie, and other critical and theoretical readings.

Junior Tutorial Goals
To introduce the discipline and practice of English literary studies at an upper-division level, & to write 20-25pp research paper in preparation for an honors thesis. You will be able to:

• Design a research question
• Develop a critical bibliography around that question, including diverse methods and viewpoints
• Put secondary criticism in conversation with a your own ideas and with other criticism
• Write with greater clarity and precision

Course-Specific Goals
To reflect critically on 20th-21st century American fiction that explores the affective and intimate dimensions of transnational experiences of displacement. You will be able to:

• Describe and use an array of approaches, terms, and methods central to diaspora and migration studies in relation to literary fiction
• Understand and critique literary theories drawing from affect studies and ethnic studies
• Generate your own ideas about broad questions of literary form, representation, and ethics

Assignments
• Thoughtful participation (10%): Students will be responsible for introducing (5-7 min. short presentation) and guiding discussion each week (starting Week 2). Attendance at departmental General Meetings is required.
• Short paper (10%): Due Week 4. 5-7pp close reading of a primary text (followed by a conference with the tutor).
• Prospectus and annotated bibliography (10%): Due Week 6. 2pp prospectus, 8-10 sources.
• Short assignments (10%): To help you think about your essay at a steady pace throughout the semester. Includes topics of interest list for library session, glossary and summary exercises, Department Writing Fellow meeting, presentation, draft revision workshop, potential Harvard Art Museum or Maps Collection visit. Details TBD.
• Full draft (20%): Due Week 11 to course site and hard copy.
• Final paper (40%): 20-25pp, on a major literary work not read in this class, due (Week 14). Submit to tutor and department by 5pm. If you do not turn in a final paper, you will not pass the tutorial.

Policies

Personal Electronic Devices: Not allowed in class, unless you need something for a presentation or otherwise have obtained permission in advance.
Academic Integrity: Familiarize yourself with Harvard FAS's Honor Code. If you have questions about anything related to citations, plagiarism, etc. or aren’t sure, please ask. Check out the Harvard Guide to Using Sources and Literary Research at Harvard.

Collaboration Policy: You are encouraged to talk with other students about the course and its readings, and to read each other’s work. In individual assignments, academic collaboration and external sources should be always cited.

Attendance: Your tutorial attendance is vital to your own success as well as to the success of the class as a whole – so is attendance of Junior Tutorial General Meetings and other required events. I will allow each student a “free” tutorial absence to be used in case of sickness, travel, etc.: no explanation necessary. Missing more than one class will decrease your participation grade; excessive absence could result in failing the course. Also, being late really disrupts the work we’re doing together: 2 lates = 1 absence. If you have attenuating circumstances, communicate with me in a timely manner so that we can discuss how to deal with it.

Deadlines and Extensions: Unless otherwise specified, assignments are due by 11:59pm on the date listed in the schedule. Late assignments will be docked 1/3 letter grade per day late, except for the final paper, which must be turned in by the due date. Students failing to turn in a final paper, or turning it in late without an official excuse, will fail the tutorial. If, well in advance of an assignment, you expect you will need an extension, please talk with me.

Email: The course email list and Canvas site will be used to distribute important info throughout the semester—from distributing handouts to adjusting assignments and deadlines. I'll usually respond to emails within 24 hours during the week, but mark time-sensitive or urgent emails in the subject.

Accommodations for Students with Disabilities: “Students needing academic adjustments or accommodations because of a documented disability must present their Faculty Letter from the Accessible Education Office (AEO) and speak with the professor by the end of the second week of the term. Failure to do so may result in the Course Head’s inability to respond in a timely manner. All discussions will remain confidential, although Faculty are invited to contact AEO to discuss appropriate implementation.”
